

USSR Regional Monitoring

☐ FOIAB3B1 collects information from USSR Regional radio broadcasts bearing on local economic, racial, and political developments. The areas covered include the distant reaches of Central Asia and the Far East. ☐ monitoring of mediumwave broadcasts in a great number of exotic languages, Uzbek, Uighur, Kazakh and others, provides more than 1,000 items a week of specific data on the internal affairs of the backwoods of the USSR. Since the majority of these pronouncements, otherwise largely unavailable, deal with specific local problems, they can be extremely revealing concerning the stresses and strains which exist within the USSR and provide indications of Soviet political, economic and social developments and vulnerabilities which are purposefully obscured by the more overt, more easily accessible, and widely disseminated official announcements from Moscow.
